

Little Acts of Kindness Make a Huge Impact on Others

...Steven Bassett

I'm not usually looking to be a happy go lucky little kid, but for about a week I was just going to be nice to whoever was there for me to be nice to. I never knew what random acts of kindness could do, but when I opened the door for some girls that couldn't open it up, and cleaned the house for my parents, I felt pretty dang good.

When I was home, I just thought that I would clean up the house for my parents while they were gone at the store. They were gone shopping so I decided to clean up the house for my parents. So I turned on some Deadmau5 and started cleaning up the whole house for my parents. I cleaned up the kitchen, the dishes, and straightened up the living room. When I had finished the house for my parents, they were very grateful and they let me play some games for a while. ☺

Next, I had been at school and finished my lunch and wanted to go to the library to finish some work. When I was walking there was a couple of girls right in front of me. When we got to the library door, they couldn't open it, they sat there discussing who would open it. I said to them "Hey would you like me to open the door for you?" They said "Sure" and "Thanks". I was a bit happy for the random act of kindness that I had done.

You Never know what some little act of kindness could do for someone. The little acts of kindness that you do, will have a huge impact on others. It could even change a person, then sets of a domino effect of kindness.
